Many brothers and sisters remember years back when we would crowd into a small store front building on the south side of Chicago each Saturday to observe the Sabbath. Brother Daniel Ashford and brother Henry Buie would bring the uncut Word of God and clear up all the fallacies and false doctrine that most of us had grown up with. The Israel of God bible class was the start of, what is now in Chicago and beyond; congregations of pastors warning their flocks of false apostles like Paul mentioned in the scriptures “For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.” II Corinthians 11:13. They warned the people like Paul taught in the scriptures of some who would come preaching “another Jesus.” (II Corinthians 11: 1 - 4).

Prior to people meeting in the storefront building during the early 1980s, they would meet at the homes of different brothers and sister’s each Sabbath to study. The Late brother James Stern held a bible class also on the south side of Chicago. He was the teacher of brother Daniel Ashford and Henry Buie. The Lord has used all of these brothers to continue to teach the Uncut Word. He said His word would be preached throughout all the earth. In the early 80s, brothers had yet to produce books, television shows pertaining to the True Word of God. This was even before the internet. They came together each Sabbath using the King James Version of the bible, some history books, encyclopedias, dictionaries, and maps to clearly teach the bible. Everyone would have a pen and paper, taking notes like a regular classroom because they shared lots of scriptures each week from various topics.

During that time we would meet each Sabbath, listening to lessons on the edge of our seats, and hearing things that were the total opposite of what we learned in Sunday school. At first we had to check our bibles to see if it was really the same bible used in Sunday school because so many new things were revealed to us. When brothers and sisters first came to bible class it was like being in a room of darkness and having the light turned on. We discovered that everything we learned in the traditional Sunday churches was the opposite of what “thus saith the Lord.” We grew up thinking when you die you go to heaven but Bro. Daniel and Bro. Henry taught lessons revealing scriptures where the Lord spoke of returning to the earth “...Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God.” Mark 1:14. He even told us to pray to our Heavenly Father, “Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.” Matthew 6:10. We discovered that there was no place in the scriptures of people going to heaven when they die. Job talked about waiting for his change to come. “I wait, till my change come.” Job 14: 14-15.

For so many years most of us had joined the rest of the world and its traditions, dragging pine trees into our homes during the “so called” holidays and decking our trees with silver and gold for Christmas each December 25th, but the scriptures revealed to us that we were doing this all in vain. (Jeremiah 10). The Lord even said this would happen “...they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.” Ezekiel 22: 26. The Lord said many would believe fables. (II Timothy 4: 4). Actually God said remember his death, because he died for our sins, not his birth that everyone chooses to celebrate on December 25th. As people continued studying with brother Bro. Buie and Bro. Ashford we saw the real importance of observing the Lord’s High days that he said should be kept throughout all generations, for an everlasting covenant. (Leviticus 23: 41). We came together on God’s appointed High days for some wonderful feasts where the bible was taught and we would feast on a grand spread of food during these times and continue to do so as the Lord has commanded.

The Lord allowed his word to be taught beyond that small storefront on the south side of Chicago, as the congregation has grown. The Israel of God moved into a larger building on the south side in the late 1980s, and a local TV show was produced The Bible Speaks that introduced more people to God’s Uncut Word. Bro. Buie wrote a book Four Winds of Heaven.

You can purchase this book at The House of Jacob if you are interested in getting a copy. Other bible classes have branched off from The Israel of God, including Bro. The House of Jacob’s television show, The Word of Truth, airs in Chicago and in other states too, (listed on the last page of this newsletter). Now-a-days Brothers also travel to other states and have established classes associated with The House of Jacob throughout the country in Detroit, Michigan, Milwaukee, Wisconsin and Evansville, Indiana. Brothers travel regularly to these locations. And with our website, people from around the world tune into the bible class live via the internet every sabbath. It has clearly been seen God’s Word is moving forward.

More Employers Scanning Workers’ Hands

NEW YORK, March 27, 2008 (AP) Some workers are doing it at Dunkin’ Donuts, at Hilton hotels, even at Marine Corps bases.

Employees at a growing number of businesses are starting and ending their days by pressing a hand or finger to a scanner that logs the precise time of their arrival and departure - information that is automatically reflected in payroll records.

The new systems have raised complaints, however, from some workers who see the efforts to track their movements as excessive or creepy.

“They don’t even have to hire someone to harass you anymore. The machine can do it for them,” said Ed Ott, executive director of the New York City Central Labor Council of the AFL-CIO. “The palm print thing really grabs people as a step too far.”

Manufacturers say these biometric devices improve efficiency and streamline payroll operations. Employers big and small buy them with the dual goals of keeping workers honest and automating outdated record-keeping systems that rely on paper time sheets.

The new systems have raised complaints, however, from some workers who see the efforts to track their movements as excessive or creepy.

“They don’t even have to hire someone to harass you anymore. The machine can do it for them,” said Ed Ott, executive director of the New York City Central Labor Council of the AFL-CIO. “The palm print thing really grabs people as a step too far.”

The International Biometric Group, a consulting firm, estimated that $635 million worth of these high-tech devices were sold last year, and projects that the industry will be worth more than $1 billion by 2011.

More Employers Scanning Workers' Hands

Ingersoll Rand Security Technologies, a leading manufacturer of hand scanners based in Campbell, California, said it has sold at least 150,000 of the devices to Dunkin’ Donuts and McDonald’s franchises, Hilton hotels and to Marine Corps bases, who use them to track civilian hours.

Protests over using palm scanners to log employee time have been especially loud in New York City, where officials are spending $410 million to install an automated attendance tracking system that may eventually be used by 160,000 city workers.

Scores of civil servants who are members of Local 375 of the Civil Service Technical Guild rallied Tuesday against a plan to add the city medical examiner’s office to the list of 17 city agencies which already have the scanners in place.

The scanners have rankled draftsmen, planners and architects in the city’s Parks Department, which began using them last year.

"Psychologically, I think it has had a huge impact on the work force here because it is demeaning and because it’s a system based on mistrust," said Ricardo Hinkle, a landscape architect who designs city parks.

He called the timekeeping system a bureaucratic intrusion on professionals who never used to think twice about putting in extra time on a project they cared about, and could rely on human managers to exercise a little flexibility on matters regarding work hours.

"The creative process isn’t one that punches in and punches out," he said.

A spokesman for Mayor Michael Bloomberg, Matthew Kelly, said the system is not meant to be intrusive and has clear benefits over old-style punch clocks or paper time sheets.

The city expects to save $60 million per year by modernizing a complicated record keeping system that now requires one full-time timekeeper for every 100 to 250 employees. The new system, dubbed CityTime, would free up thousands of city employees to do less paper-pushing.

Another benefit of the system is curtailing fraud. Several times each year, New York City’s Department of Investigation charges city employees with taking unauthorized time off and falsifying timecards to make it looked as though they worked.

Other cities have embraced similar technology.

Cities as big as Chicago and as small as Tahlequah, Oklahoma, have turned to fingerprint-driven ID systems to record employee work hours in recent few years. And the systems have been introduced into plenty of other workplaces without much grumbling by employees, especially those already used to punching a clock.

But the New York workers are not the first to fight it. The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees complained vigorously two years ago after the city of Pittsburgh proposed installing fingerprint readers.

"We had a lot of questions, a lot of concerns, and so far they haven’t put it in," said AFCME Council 84 Director Richard Caponi.

Jon Mooney, Ingersoll Rand’s general manger of biometrics, said the privacy concerns are unfounded. The hand scanners do not keep large databases of people’s fingerprints - only a record of their hand shape, he said.

Still, union officials in New York said they are concerned that the machines could eventually be used not just to crack down on employees skipping work, but to nitpick honest workers or invade their privacy.

"The bottom line is that these palm scanners are designed to exercise more control over the workforce," said Claude Fort, president of Local 375. "They aren’t there for security purposes. It has nothing to do with productivity... It is about control, and that is what makes us nervous."
